DEEPER MYSTERY.

Many Theories Regarding the Cause of Mary Tobin's Death.

Dr. Feeney, Who Made the Autopsy, Is Silent.

Who Was the Boy that Returned Dr. Robinson's Book ?

The mystery surrounding the death of the young woman who was picked up on the rocks at Clifton. Staten Island, and who was identified as Mary E. Tobin, grows still deeper. Dr. James Feeney, who made the autopsy, was seen by an Evenino World reporter this morning, but declined to tell what he had discovered, beyond saying that the girl had not met with foul play.

There are many theories affoat among Staten Islanders, however, and when the mysterious oase is spoken of, it is pointed out that the girl was engaged to be married to a young man who case is spoken of, it is pointed out that the girl was engaged to be married to a young man who is stated by some people to be a resident of New Brighton and by others a Wall street broker.

When the question is asked whether the young woman's affianced knows anything of the case there are mysterious shakes of the head.

Dr. Robinson, who identified the girl, says that she left his employ on April 13 and started for the home of a friend in Long Island City. She returned on Monday to bid his family farewell, and before leaving she offered to take the doctor's index book and copy in a number of addresses that had not yet been entered. The book was wrapped in a piece of brown paper and addressed to the doctor.

Miss Tobin then called on Dr. Bryan. She remained there some time and seemed to be worried about something.

Finally Dr. Bryan waked over to the station and put her aboard a train for St. George. That was the last seen of her alive.

On the following Wednesday Dr. Robinson received a call from Miss Tobin's friend, Miss McKinney, of Long Island City.

The latter said that she had expected Mary to return to her house, and was alarmed at not seeing her. The doctor said he thought she had gone to her home in Franklin. Pa.

The following Saturday afternoon a boy called at the doctor's and left the index that had taken sway by Miss Tobin.

It was wrapped in the same paper and evidently had not been touched.

The boy left without explaining how he came in possession of the parcel.

Several days later the dead girl's relatives in Pennsylvania inquired about her, and then Dr. Robinson became alarmed.

Who the boy was who brought the index is not known; if it were the mystery might be cleared up at once.

An Eventso Woman reporter called upon Coro who the boy was who broage the mystery might be cleared up at once.

An Eventing World reporter called upon Coroner Hughes at his office in Rosebank early this atternoon. He said that the relatives of Miss Tobin, who live in McKeesport, Pa., had been notified, but had not yet put in an appearance. Coroner Hughes was unable to say when the inquest would be held. Dr. Feeney, who made the autopsy, removed certain portions of the intestines and placed them in a jar,

The jar was taken charge of by the Coroner, who, with Dr. Feeney, visited this city and delivered the intestines to the physicians of Bellevie to be analyzed.

The Coroner declined to state whether any traces of poison had been discovered.

He delared that Dr. Feeney, who held the autopsy, had withheld all information, and he was unable to tell in what condition the internal organs were when removed.

The result of the investigation by Dr. Feeney will be kept secret until the inquest is held.

Saxton Bill.

Try to Override It ?

Fully Satisfied with It.

Gov. Hill's veto of the Saxton Electoral Reform bill occasioned little or no suprise among the politicians of either party. The general idea gleaned from interviews with all classes seemed to be that his failure to approve the measure was a foregone conclusion.

The various comments on the Executive's acprove the measure was a foregone conclusion. The various comments on the Executive's actions and his reasons therefore, were as varied as the politics of the commentators.

Tammany Hall men were pleased and did not hesitate to express their approbation of the Governor's course with reference to the bill which they have persistently opposed.

County Democrats, while not so effusive in their praise of Gov. Hill's action, still commended it, while lie-publicans and reform Democrats condemned the veto in unmeasured terms.

They said that the Governor's arguments are sophistry, that they are lame apologies for shirking his plain duty, that, in fact, Gov. Hill is simply trying to raise a dust of reasons which are without reason to hide the true political motive which actuated him in the return of the bill to the Legislature without his approval.

Among those interviewed concerning the veto were the following:

Mayor Grant—I am not prepared to give my opinion of the text of the veto, for the simple reason that I have not had time to read it. Nor would I venture an opinion upon the mere fact of the veto, for I am not fully informed as to the provisions of the bill itself. I have had so much to do attending to the city's affairs that I have not followed the bill with all its amendments. If it is similar to last year's bill it is thoroughly bad.

Commissioner of Publice Works Gilroy—I think the Governor did perfectly right. The Saxon bill would have disfranchised thousands, and I am opposed to placing any limit upon the suffrages of the people.

Alderman John Carlin (Rep.)—I am in accord with The Workle in the position against the veto. I think the Republicans in the Legislature will attem pt to override it.

Alderman John Carlin (Rep.)—I full were at Albany I assure you I would vote right on the question to pass the bill over the Governor's veto.

Assistant Postmaster Gaylor (Rep.)—I never express any opinions on political matters for publication.

Police Commissioner Stephen B. French—I don't care to express any opinion—that is, not just yet.

Alderman Rapp—I was in favor of the Saxton bill. Its author is a clear-headed, sensible man, and after reading the Governor's message I cannot see why he vetoed it. He should have allowed it to pass. The Republicans may pass it over the veto.

Alderman Morris—The Saxton bill is a good one and the Governor's should have signed it. I read his message and I can truthfully say that he gives no good reasons for vetoing it.

Gov. Hill's reasons for vetoing the Saxton bill are given by him at great length. He says the evils which the bill purports to remedy really evist and are widespread, but is his opinion the Saxton bill is not the measure to remedy them. He declares that in the form in which it was first presented to him it would abolish all elections, and even when amended the end in view was not attained.

Among the features in the bill which the Govtions, and even when amended the end in view was not strained.

Among the features in the bill which the Governor heartily approves of is the system of private booths, through which electors must pass on their way to the ballot-box.

Of the many objectionable features he finds in the bill, he refers to two in particular, namely, the requirement that none but an officially printed ballot shall be voted, and the requirement that every ticket shall contain all the names of candidates and parties.

Finally he strenuously objects to the exclusive ballot system and concludes by lauding many important points in the "Linson" bill now pending in the Legislature.

THIRTY FEET OF BROADWAY SENT FLYING THROUGH THE AIR.

A gang of workmen were busily engaged this morning repairing the hole in Broadway on the northwest corner of Fifteenth street, caused by an explosion in the subway at that spot last night.

The blow-up occurred about 10.30. Fortunately there were no vehicles or pedestrians in the vicinity at the time, so nobody was injured. The noise of the explosion was heard for blocks around and attracted the attention of Policeman Corn, of the West Thirtieth street station, who was going south on his beat along Union Square, about forty feet from the subway. He looked around in time to see a section of Broadway flying in all directions through the sit. He made an investigation and found that about thirty feet of the street had been torn up by the force of the explosion, which it is supposed was caused by spontaneous combustion of gas in the trench.

Haus Makart's Beautiful Models.

Hans Makart's Beautiful Models. [From the Philadelphia Times.]

Talking of pictures recalls an interesting bit of information regarding the late Viennese master, Hans Makart. In comparing the works of the great painter one cannot help being struck with the recurrence of two stately figures, usually the most important of the picture. In his "Diana." his "Charles V. Entering Antwerp" and many others these figures of surpassing beauty occur again and again. The originals of the pictures are now living in Vienna. They are the two daughters of Horr Klinkosch, a leading gold and silver smith of the city. Klinkosch, the father, is an expert in his profession. Most of his work consists in designing presents for the royal family and the Government, as gifts to foreign ambassadors. Makart was his intimate friend, and, receiving permission, painted his daughters as the herolnes of his great painting. Instantly they became the rage, and the Viennesse Court, usually so punctillous regarding questions of birth, freely welcomed the beauties immortalized by the brush of the painter. It is some years now since Makart died, but the beautiful Klinkosch sisters, although a little passee, are still seen in Vienna society. They are both unmarried. of the great painter one cannot help being A Story of Herman Octrichs.

One of three young swells who were dining with Ocirichs in the New York Athletic Club determined to put his host's far-famed marine dartermined to put his host's far-famed marine dar-ing to a severe test. The four men were arrayed in full evening dress. After dinner the large and deep swimming tank on the first floor of the building was inspected. Standing on the spring-ing-board, one of the young men suddenly said: "Herman, join me in a header," and instantly dived overboard, swallow-tailed coat, broad ex-panse of shirt bosom, white the and all. With-out saying a word, and dressed; just as he was, Oelrich, sprang after him. The other two could not withstand this foolish challenge to their nerves, and in another second four men in even-ing dress were swimming in the tank. All this may have been idiotic, but it was certainly novel.

Baltimore Companies.

the "Times's " Charges,

President Charles G. Wilson, of the Board of Health, in reply to charges made by the Times as to his connection with certain loan companies in Baltimore, said yesterday to an Even-ING WORLD reporter:

It is true that I was connected with these companies, but neither as President, Treasurer nor director in any one of them. I was simply counsel, and aithough I had a good deal to do with the management of thom, it was simply in that capacity. This morning the Times publishes lists of officers of these companies purporting to be copies of the title pages of the by-laws. The list of the Lexington Savings Bank as given by

When an Evening World reporter called President Wilson's attention to these discrepancies this morning President Wilson said:

I said that I had acted for the Baltimore panies as counsel, and not as an officer or companies as counsel, and not as an officer or director.

It is true possibly that in 1869 I was made President, Treasurer and director in some of the companies, but the events of twenty years ago are rather dim in memory now.

The Times tortures my statements in The Eventso World, and falsely states that it was in 1879 that I held these offices. That could not be the correct date, for the Company was in the hands of a receiver in 1874—four years before I am credited with holding these positions.

Stress is laid upon a loan of $28,000 bonds in 1879. That was purely a business transaction, a legitimite loan for the benefit of the Company, an occurrence of every-day notoriety with corporations that need money, and naturally we went to friends and not enemies to secure the loan.

The fact remains that all of my transactions for the companies were as counsel, and when properly explained the public will see that I did nothing that possibly could reflect on my integrity as a man.

I have decided to pay no more newspaper

"I have decided to pay no more newspaper attention to the charges. I do not propose to fight the matter in the papers, but when the Times gets through with the matter I shall act under competent legal advice, and my action, depend upon it, will be very decisive."

night. He exchanged his good clothes for old ones on arriving at the scow and left them in the cabin.

They were still there when the day watchman came to relieve him, but the owner of the clothes was missing.

He has not been seen since. His relatives and friends have made a careful and exhaustive search of police records, hospitals and the Morgue, but not the slightest trace of him has been found.

They have come to the conclusion that he has met with foul play, and certain facts give support to this theory.

When the workmen arrived at the dredging seew Wednesday morning and did not find Quackenbuish about, they did not shink much of the matter until evidences of a struggle on board one of the scows met their eves.

Tobacco was found scattered around the deck, which was cratched and covered with dirt. A small boat was missing. This was found under a dock later in the day.

These circumstances, coupled with the knowledge that Quackenbush had had frequent rows with the gang of toughs who infest the river front, have forced his friends to believe that he was foully dealt with.

More than once he came home and related how the roughs had forced themselves aboard of the seew and either demanded money or wanted to sleep there.

It is not believed that he is on a spree, for he had no money, and there is three weeks' pay awaiting him at the Public Works office.

Quackenbush was a man of slim build and was 5 feet 2 inches tall. He wore gray side whiskers, mustache and hair and was slightly bald.

His chin was clean shaven, and he had a cast in his right eye. He was sixty-two years old and married, having a family of six daughters.

TACOMA, W. T., May 14.—The city is in gloom over a frightful catastrophe which came on the wing's of yesterday's storm. When the storm broke over the town last evening twenty men were pushing work on a new building which Walker Bates was having constructed under his own direction.

The storm was accompanied by a heavy wind; and as it struck the building the structure shook to its very foundations, and then, yielding to the blow, fell in a mass of ruips. In the midst of the debris were buried the workmen. The crash of the falling building attracted verybody within hearing and an alarm sent out at once brought many more people to the scene. Willing hands were quickly at work to rescue the living and bring out the bodies of the dead. First to be reached was the crushed and lifeess form of Walker Bates, the owner and uilder of the fallen structure. Mr. Bates's son-in-law, W. H. Snell, the Tavas taken out seriously injured.

Others found dead were a workman named McDonald and three not yet identified. Rev. W. A. Mackey, pastor of the Presby-terian Church, was badly hurt. He had stepped within the building to get out of the rain. The building was a frame structure, three tories high, and made such a pile of debris that not all of it has yet been overhauled. At the hour when this despatch is sent the groans of workmen still held beneath the mass can be heard by those working over the ruins. It is not known whether more than five wer streets, where two men were killed and another perhaps fatally injured yeaterday, by the collapse of the walls.

The survivors of the accident blamed the contractors as being the cause of it, saying that they neglected to have the rickety old structure properly braced.

Mr. McGregor, who was on the scene a few minutes after the disaster, stated that he had ordered the wall braced, but that his instructions had been disregarded by his foreman.

George Thomas, the foreman of the gang of laborers, who was so terribly injured by the falling of the wall, is reported by the house surgeon of St. Vincent's Hospital to-day to have a fair chance of recovery. He has extensive and severe lacerations of the face and a badly broken nose. Some of the other facial bones are also broken. A PLUM FOR PLUMMER.

Mr. Allen rode a buckskin horse and Capt. Platt a black. They were old travellers, purchased for the occasion. Each rider was provided with a rubber blanket, an extra fiannel shirt and pair of socks. They were dressed in corduror riding coats. buckskin tronsers and high-top riding boots with spurs.

The party of riders rode down through Central Park by the west drive, thence through Eighth avenue, Hudson and Deabrosses streets to the ferry, which was reached at 8.30.

Good-byes were said, and the horsemen rode on to a ferry-boat and bade farewell to New York for a year. They began their long journey impediately on landing in Jersey City, passing up Newark avenue. They will rest in Plainfield to-night, at Highbridge to-morrow night and at Easton, Pa., Thursday night. They will travel in easy stages of thirty miles a day, never resting more than one night in a place.

This route will take them through Columbus, O., Indianapolis, Ind., Hanover, Mo., Leavenworth, Kam., Denver, Salt Lake City and the alkali desert of Utah, and Carson City to Frisco, which they expect to reach in October.

Mr. Allen is proprietor of Hotel Hamilton. He has been in Ill health for many months. Recently he became heir to a windfall and he was enabled to seek health.

His physician prescribed saddle rides, and Mr. Allen has ridden on every road about New York till the scenes are all stale. Hence this trip, in which he foots the bills for his companion and tutor at the riding academy.

Capt. Platt was despatch courier for Gen. Grant during the rebellion, and has had many years' experience on Texas plains and Colorado prairies. He is fifty-eight years of age, but aits a horse like a Centaur.

The equestrians will be joined by Mrs. Allen and Mrs. Platt at San Francisco. The ladies will leave New York in September, consuming amonth in a ra MARRIED AT LAST.

Blanche Roqueplan Gets a Husband After a 6,000-Mile Chase.

Romantically Wedded at the City Hall This Afternoon.

A Month Ago the Bride Had the Groom Arrested for Theft.

A very romantic marriage was performed by Judge Ehrlich, in Part III. of the City Court, this afternoon. The bride is one of the most persistent wome living.

She figured in the courts less than a month ago as accusing the bridegroom of stealing 8,000 france from her. She had chased an unwilling bridegroom ever six thousand miles before she finally prevailed on him to be her worser half. The contracting parties were Mme. Blanche Roqueplan, née Bru, of Paris, France, and Cmaar W. Beckman, of the same place.

Beckman prevailed on Mme. Boquepian to leave her husband about three years ago and go with him to Panama, where she invested her Here they lived together as man and wife without the form of marriage having taken place between them. They prospered, or rather Mme. Roqueplan did, for the property was hers. She wanted Beckman to marry her, but the man in the case demurred. She was persistent, and finally Beckman, rather than marry, deserted her. Mme. Roqueplan disposed of her property in Panama and followed her runaway lover. Through Central America, Mexico and the United States she kept on his trail until she brought him to earth in this city." She found him at a second-class hotel in Pearl street, and there lived with him for three or four Beckman again took to his heels and started for the Western wilds.

He went to Miwaukee and, through her attorneys, Le Barbier & Brewster, of 35 Broadway, Mme. Roqueplan secured his arrest in that city and went on with a private detective to bring him back.

Beckman was cornered.

He signed an agreement to return to New York and marry the woman.

It took the plucky little woman six days to get Beckman back, for he tried to escape her vigilance several times, but she was always wide awake.

The couple reached New York this morning and Mme. Roqueplan took the unwilling bridegroom to Mayor Grant's office to have the ceremony performed.

DROUGHT FOLLOWED BY A CYCLONE.

Terrible Storm Whirle Its Way Through the Ohio Valley. ISPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD, I Parts. Ky., May 14.—The drought which has prevailed throughout the Ohio Valley for the last six weeks was broken last night by one of the most severe rain, hall and wind storms ever witnessed in this section. In the Townsend Valley and Centreville precincts hallstones as large as hen's eggs and cincts halistones as large as hen's eggs and weighing several ounces fell, destroying growing crops and killing many fowls.

At Hutchinson James Harp's barn was struck by lightning and burned to the ground.

Around North Middletown and Mt. Sterling the wind was most severe: trees were uprooted, fences scattered broadcast and several houses relieved of their roofs.

The sterm was travelling in an easterly direction, and seemed to increase in velocity as it travelled.
